

Oh, another O! Omaha's new logo around town

MARION RHODES

You may have seen them already – large, bright red O's all over Omaha. Two O's even made it to UNO, occupying the pavement near the Dodge Street bus station in front of the Student Center.

You may have asked yourself: What's up with the O?

As the new logo for Omaha, O! will be popping up all over the city in the near future, said Sharon Brodkey, director of communications with the Greater Omaha Chamber of Commerce.

Just like Omaha is a surprising city, O! will surprise Omahans and the city's visitors in surprising places and forms, she said. As of Friday, 10 O's had been painted throughout the city.

Giant red "O's" are popping up across Omaha as part of the city's new public relations campaign to boost tourism efforts.

That's just the beginning, Brodkey said.

"You've got to keep your eyes and ears open and looking for the O's," she said, adding that branding the city is going to become a lot more interactive.

O! was chosen by the chamber, the city, the Convention and Visitor's Bureau and several community leaders to replace Omaha's old logo "Rare, Well Done."

Research had shown that Omahans have a tremendous community pride and are excited about what's happening in the development of their city, Brodkey said. She said people are often surprised when they come to Omaha to find how many attractions the city has to offer.

"I think that the O and the exclamation point perfectly embodies those three things," she said. "Slogans don't always accomplish that."

University Library hoping to change its look

JILL SINDELAR

The UNO Library Friends are working on giving the library's lobby a fresh face.

Plans for the renovation include replacing the four current dilapidated display cases and installing two new benches in the library lobby.

The current lobby display cases were installed when the library was built in 1975. Since then, the glass doors, shelves, and mirror backs have become unstable, resulting in broken shelves, doors, and even injuries to people who were changing the displays at the time.

"The lobby project will greatly enhance the front doors of the university library," said Jan Boyer, University Library dean. "It will be a nice place for people to wait for the library to open, talk on cell phones, or just wait for a friend."

The renovation project would replace the old display cases with smaller, shallower and flatter display cases to better accommodate book jackets and posters.

Boyer said the display cases are a popular feature in the library. She said she receives many comments about the interesting things found in the display cases and feels that it is important to continue to showcase the library in the display cases.

The new display cases will be much nicer, safer, and more functional for library staff to exhibit new displays every month. Angela Kroeger, cataloging associate at the library, designed the plans for the project.

The renovation plan also calls for two resin park benches that could be bolted to the floor. The addition of benches in the lobby would provide sitting room for patrons that were never before available to them.

"The display committee is very proud of Angela Kroeger's design and is pleased the Library Council and Library Friends have agreed to the renovation," said Gayle Roberts, president of the committee. "The new benches and modernized display cabinets will be beneficial to all library patrons."

Boyer said the total cost for the library lobby renovation will be a little more than $8,000. Currently, the library has raised $1,300 to help make their renovation dream a reality.

"All donations, no matter how small, will be greatly appreciated," said Roberts.

Students, faculty or staff paying a visit to the library can donate their loose change in a drop box located inside the main entrance underneath the sign labeled Library Lobby Fundraiser.

Fall in Step with A Walk to Wellness

JILL SINDELAR

Staff writer

Lace up those sneakers! All members of the UNO community are invited to fall in step with the recently formed Walk to Wellness Program.

The Mav-Rec Stampede sponsors the program.

"[It] is designed to encourage individuals of the UNO Campus Community to regularly engage in one of the best exercises a person can do – walking," said Dave Daniels, assistant director for fitness/wellness and instruction programs at UNO.

Anyone on campus is welcome to join the Walk to Wellness. Walking can be a benefit to people regardless of age, gender, level of conditioning, or athletic ability, Daniels said.

He said walking and other aerobic activity has been proven to make the lungs healthier, burn calories, help with weight management, lower blood pressure, decrease stress, increase mental function, increase energy levels and do a host of other things.

Unlike many exercises, walking doesn't require a learning curve or great amount of skill, agility or coordination. It is also relatively inexpensive. The only requirement is a good pair of shoes.

"The great thing about walking is it involves less stress on the joints and connective tissues than some exercises such as running or jogging," Daniels said. "Also, studies have shown that when small work periods, such as 10 to 15 minutes, are combined together in one day, they are almost equivalent to doing one longer 30 [minute] workout."

The Walk to Wellness Program will offer the following three courses:

Long Course: 30 to 40 minutes on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. Walkers start at 12:15 p.m. at the front door of the Health Physical Education and Recreation Building. The group walks through Elmwood Park, Memorial Park or the North Campus.

Short Course: 10 to 15 minutes on

UNO takes part in the American Democracy Project

CARRIE ZAAVER
Senior staff writer

UNO has volunteered to participate in the American Democracy Project, a national program that is aimed at increasing student involvement in the community and public life.

The New York Times and the American Association of State Colleges and Universities created the program. UNO is one of 145 participating universities.

Clair Fleener with the Office of Academic and Student Affairs at UNO said the project was created to address the problem of declining public interest in community affairs and government. It is the first of its kind to take a systematic look at community engagement and focus on college students, he said.

Students are in a unique position because they have a lot of influence as young voters and consumers, Fleener said.

"Democracy is not a spectator sport. It's not something that you can invent once, put on the shelf and expect it to be there in the same form when you go back to it 10 years later."

The main goal of the project is to increase citizen activity in things such as community groups, volunteer organizations and politics.

Fleener said one thing the program will do is recognize, encourage and reward the civic-oriented activities that are already going on at UNO.

"Many of our student organizations have, as one of their main tenets, the idea of community involvement," he said. "If we can report on those activities and give them a little press, then it helps their cause and it also helps ours by showing the community the kind of impact the university has."

Another plan of the project is to recognize and add to the courses at UNO that include some aspect of civic engagement such as internships, practicums and service learning, Fleener said. A survey of the nearly 3,200 courses at UNO showed that around 600 have such a component, and almost half of those are graduate courses.

Fleener said a responsibility of the project is to show students that it is in their best interest to be involved and that their Mondays through Fridays. This course will start at 2:15 p.m. at the south door of the Eppley Administration Building. The group will walk around the Pep Bowl.

Inclement Weather Course: This walk lasts 30 minutes and starts at the north door of the Milo Bail Student Center. On days with bad weather or temperatures below 45 degrees, the long walk groups will meet at Student Center and take the shuttle to Crossroads to walk indoors.

"The short walk groups will not meet if the weather is too severe, but individuals are encouraged to walk in their respective buildings, at the HPER building track, or fit their walks in at home," Daniels said.

The Walk to Wellness Program also allows participants to earn hoof prints for Mav Tracks. Mav Tracks is the incentive portion of the Wellness Stampede. It is a free, self-monitoring program. Hoof prints, or points, are earned for documented wellness activities, and prizes are earned once given point levels are reached.

The Walk to Wellness Program hoof prints are rewarded in this manner: 1,000 steps per day = 1 hoof print. 2,000 = 2 hoof prints. 3,000 = 3 hoof prints. 4,000 = 4 hoof prints. 6,000 = 5 hoof prints. 8,000 = 6 hoof prints. 10,000 = 7 hoof prints.

Pedometers with step-measuring capabilities are available at local sporting goods stores, fitness retail stores or through the Wellness Stampede. They usually run about $15 to $20.

For participants who don't want to purchase a step pedometer, there will be a hoof print system based on time: 30 minutes = 5 points; 45 minutes = 6 points; and 1 hour = 7 points.

"The Walk to Wellness Program is a good idea because it will allow people to get involved in the UNO community and exercise at the same time," said Amanda Synowicki, a sophomore exercise science major.

For more information about the Walk to Wellness Program, contact Daniels at 554-2008 or Gayle Roberts at 554-3205.

Considering The Matrix Bashara: revolting or role model?

Popular culture in this country revolves around fads. I was somewhat surprised when I found out that a relatively large number of people had indicated their religion as "Jedi" on the last US census. The purpose of a large portion of the entertainment arts in this country is not merely to titillate the senses of those who engage the works thereof, but to create an alternate reality for them to live. In other words, the business of entertainment is built on what we now have to hold to be defacto religions, complete with their preachers, holy literature and fanatics. The icons of popular entertainment are idols, to be worshipped, and consulted about the minutest details – their stories, as told by the screen and other media are gospels and a guide for living. A couple of years back, a new fad arose attracting a large number of adherents. It was The Matrix and it was sublime. This story possessed all the required ingredients for an enduring legacy – enigmatic characters, words uttered in a spirit of wisdom and issues of genuine philosophical concern. There was just enough mystery in The Matrix to ensure that people would come asking for more and just enough revelation to ensure that those who came would stay.

The first saga of The Matrix closed on a messianic note. A promise of return, the hope of freedom and the reality of a second coming – this delighted proponents and fanatics to no end; not only had The Matrix cleverly

Coming to America

presented germane questions to a large audience, it had done so without appearing preachy and this was a feat worthy of note. Years passed and the adherents waited for the coming and the return – all that happened this year but I doubt if any "faith" is left in the hearts of the disillusioned masses that cluttered around this upstart cult. The Matrix Reloaded was the first foreboding of the evil things ahead. The gospel, as it were, fell upon dangerous inconsistencies. Passion in the process of story telling was replaced by banal dialogue and the revelation of key principles obscured by an endless array of miracles, miracles and more miracles – the spirits of foolish followers clouded by the carnal appeal of the spectacular. But this was not all – undeveloped characters were introduced into the narrative, their purpose; unknown, their acts, all the more spectacular, the ostensible reason for this being a further obfuscation of the ideological shallowness of the installment. In Reloaded, banality was placed on a pedestal and worshipped, repetition was the order of the day and apparent esotericism was often shown to be fraud. Yet, this aspect of the saga evaded the greater burden of responsibility because it essentially was a bridge – thus it closed and graciously so, on a note of further hope and expectation – with any bit of luck in anticipation of redemption by the concluding elements of the story. Alas, no such redemption was to be found.

This week I'm going to be a little selfish and use the 800 words or so The Gateway gives me to examine the moral decisions I've made in life; to try to figure out if I am in fact the decadent monster that some readers see me as.

Trying to think back and remember the "good" and "bad" things I've done in life, I find it strange how the bad things surface so easily and the good are recalled so foggily. It may be simpler if I start with the good, then the bad.

When I was 10 years old and on vacation with my parents, I stole a lollipop from a convenience store. I never got caught. I ate that sucker and it probably tasted even better because I got to save my 25 cents for a video game instead. Even though I knew my behavior was wrong, I oddly felt no remorse.

Skip ahead a couple years.

I'll have to be excruciatingly honest: I was a horny little kid. Although I had a very loose understanding about the mechanics of sex, I found myself distracted by sexual urges at a very young age. Pornography became my new best friend. Without getting in to too much detail, I'll just say that my late-grade school and early junior high years were a very busy time after school.

Now I use this as an example of something "bad" or "immoral" because it's the general consensus that young children aren't supposed to possess or view pornography. Although I lost my virginity at a respectable age, I now believe that my infatuation with porn warped my sense of reason when it comes to sex. After graduating high school, I went about as crazy as a termite in a sawmill. I had lost any and all emotional attachment to sex; it turned out to be game of quantity and quality.

Manic Digression

Rewind a few years.

I made my first bomb when I was 14. It was a crude little construct—more of a big firecracker than anything else—but it paved the way for a lot of dangerous activity. By 16, I was making black-powder explosives out of metal casings and cannon fuse. By my 18th birthday, I was making explosives that could have leveled a small shed.

Now keep in mind that I had no intention of using these to harm anyone—I just loved the bang. I was always the kid who started salivating in early May, even when the Fourth of July was a good couple months down the road.

Also around that time—the summer before my senior year—I was introduced into the enticing world of drugs. I started out just smoking pot—a lot of it. This eventually evolved into smoking just about anything that would fit into a pipe or on a sheet of aluminum foil. Then came the nasal-ingested variety. Eventually, it became a matter of quitting or kissing college goodbye. I chose to quit.

There were a lot of other decisions sprinkled in-between: the decision to cheat on

Omaha's party night

Black man w/ attitude

Early Bryant

We all know what night is Omaha's premiere party night. It's the night when everyone (and I mean everyone) goes out in this city. The excitement of this night is hyped by the fact that anything can happen. And guess what, people? You still have to get up to go to class. Thursday night is Omaha's party night. It's ladies night at every bar in town and every guy is on the hunt. Incase you haven't been out on a Thursday, I'm going detail a typical Thursday night in Omaha and also detail some characters involved in that special night.

The most famous spot on Thursday night is in the 114th Dodge area. I can't say the name of the club. This is one of the local gathering spots on Thursday night. This spot will be our primary setting for our party night. In this location, you can find everything needed for a great party night and even some things not needed. The music is okay most of the time, but you're distracted by the expensive drinks and by the fact that it's ladies night. So you get any female you know to buy your drink for two dollars, while yours will cost you five if you buy it. Last but not least, you have a ratio of 10 guys to every girl. Ok, that is an exaggeration. But to know why I'm exaggerating, read on.

The characters in this club are of a large variety. You have the guys, a majority of them a mix between a metrosexual wannabe, a K-mart model and a few Eminem wannabes. So ladies, make sure you pick wisely. The girls, though, are a bit more versatile. You have the Britney Spears wannabes – you know, the back in day bad schoolgirls. These girls walk how they think Britney would. They're even looking for their Justin Timberlake, a white guy with his voice and rhythm. The next kind of

The (real) silent majority – part three

Making sense

Tin Mak

Wooing voters in the middle may call for strategies a little different from those used to court other voters. To woo voters on either ends of the extreme, emotions may be more effective than most other tools. But to convince the middle voters to see things your way, reasoning is sometimes the only way. To these middle ground voters, emotions can't compensate for faulty arguments, weak logics, or poor reasoning.

I believe you have seen these before. Some super-liberals hate certain conservative figures to the bone. And, one day, when they read some negative news on those conservatives, their immediate reaction was a big "Ah ha!" Similarly, some ultra-conservatives who hate some liberal personalities will give out their share of "Uh huh! I told you so!" when they come across news unfavorable to those liberals. It may be surprising to some, but careful observations will tell us that some people do not read or watch the news to get more information, but to selectively seek out those that either conform to their views or otherwise entertain them.

The picture is a little different for those in the middle. These folks tend to be more intelligent, educated, open-minded, understanding and able to see things from both sides' points of view. The great thing is, they also tend to be optimistic people, and ready to help make the country – and the world – a better place for all. In an era when some on the left are crying that the world is getting worse or even coming to an end, while some on the right are saying the same things plus moral decay, these people in the middle generally think that as a whole, our country is becoming a better place for all.

These people tend to be turned off by appeals from the left calling for programs to "soak the rich." They are equally turned off by proposals from the right to "teach those liberals a lesson."

Letter to the editor

Dear editor:

Dan Koborg began his Oct. 31st commentary on gay marriage with his admitted ignorance. Sadly, a portion of society still exists that shares his backward and bigoted views on homosexuality and the right to marriage.

I am a homosexual and I will clarify that homosexuality is, in fact, not a choice. Furthermore, it's not a lifestyle, it's a life. It is a life that I live every day as a tax paying American citizen. I have no reason to believe that I should be excluded from any of society's institutions that my fellow citizens have perfectly equal access to.

By Koborg's assertion, marriage is in place solely for the purpose of procreation and child rearing. I'm sure that idea comes as quite a shock to all of those married heterosexual couples that cannot or choose not to have children, yet are still deeply in love. I hope for their sake that Koborg doesn't go to Lincoln or Washington in order to have their marriages ruled legally invalid based on their not fulfilling that one essential function of making babies. Many of us may argue that it is none of Koborg's or his fellow zealot's business, but who are we to stop them from prying into the personal lives and bedrooms of the rest of us? After all, this is only the United States of America!

I deeply support Koborg's right to his opinions on

Bangkok Cuisine — A taste of Thailand

REVIEW BY ARIANA TAJDINI
Staff writer

Many people may not see the small restaurant enclosed between The Rose costume gallery and another building. It is a fairly small building; you have to look closely to see the sign. The name of this superb, cozy little restaurant, located at 1905 Farnam St., is Bangkok Cuisine.

I first came across this restaurant when two of my friends wanted to take me out for lunch. They were ecstatic to take me to their favorite Thai restaurant and presented me with no other choice by luring me inside and protesting the best Pad Thai they had ever encountered. Having tried Thai food only once before, I was thrilled to check it out.

As you sit down, the aroma of the spicy dishes fills your nostrils. Placed on the center of the table is a flower, a jar of fresh peanuts, soy sauce, and the rest of the "sure to wake you up" sauces.

The décor and lighting depict a traditional Thai feel. The servers are pleasant and friendly and serve the food promptly.

We waited for what seemed like less than five minutes before our meal was served. My friends insisted I try the Pad Thai, which is a favorite dish of many who enjoy Thai food. There are levels to all Thai food, 1 being extremely mild to 10, which will scorch your socks off. I tried a three, just to be safe, considering it was my first time eating there. The rest of my friends chose a five and a seven. The seven was unbelievable! I couldn't even take a bite without smelling how hot it was.

The portion size of the Pad Thai is enormous enough to be taken home and eaten for several leftovers. The Pad Thai was extremely delicious and I was told to make sure I piled mounds of fresh peanuts on top of it. Well, I had to agree — it happened to be the best food I'd had in awhile.

The prices are unbeatable for the main entrees, ranging from $5.99 to $7.49. This is an excellent restaurant to experience Thai food on a student budget. There's also a variety of Thai desserts and beverages.

Overall, my experience here was pleasant. Bangkok Cuisine has some of the best Thai food in town!

Tips for healthier holiday eating, snacking

VALERIE CUTSHALL
Senior staff writer

The holidays are approaching and many people begin to worry about those naughty holiday pounds. For most, the holidays are a joyous time for gathering with friends and family and eating delicious food. But for some, the holidays can be a very dreaded time.

Approximately 97 million adults are considered to be obese, said Rita Frickle, a clinical dietitian at Creighton University. On average, a person will gain five to seven pounds over the holiday months.

Frickle offered some tips for keeping those unwanted holiday pounds off:

1. Lighten up recipes. Instead of using the whole amount of shortening, use 1/4 the amount the recipe calls for and use applesauce for the rest. This is only for recipes that are not crispy. For cookies and other crispy items, use the recommended amount of shortening.

2. A good sugar substitute is Splenda,

Frickle said. You can substitute all the sugar a recipe calls for with Splenda.

3. Snack before you go to a holiday party. If you snack beforehand, you will be less likely to overeat, Frickle said.

4. Fill up on fiber. Graze on fruit and vegetables.

5. Snack smart. Eat fruits and vegetables. Most portions are super sized, even in restaurants, Frickle said. A good rule of thumb is try to eat a 3-ounce portion of meat. That is approximately the size of a deck of cards or the palm of a woman's hand.

6. Keep active. Do at least 30 minutes of exercise each day. If you cannot exercise for 30 minutes at one time, break it up, Frickle said. Try 10 minutes in the morning, 10 minutes at lunch and 10 minutes in the evening.

Remember, holidays are supposed to be spent with family and friends.

Have fun and enjoy yourself, but remember "moderation, not elimination," Frickle said.

Lil' Burro enjoyable

REVIEW BY SARAH HAHN
Staff writer

Upon my arrival at Lil' Burro Mexican Restaurant with my younger brother, Andrew, we were enveloped by the aromas of Mexican cuisine. The cozy restaurant produced tantalizing smells that made my mouth water.

We entered the restaurant, which is located at Capehart Road and South 29th Avenue in Bellevue. A friendly hostess, who led us to our booth by the window, immediately greeted us. She returned with a bowl of warm, crispy tortilla chips and salsa.

As I looked around the restaurant, which first opened its doors eight and a half years ago, I noticed the unique decor. Vintage advertisements for assorted beverages covered the green walls, along with some neon signs near the bar. With both non-smoking and smoking sections, the atmosphere was relaxed and inviting.

Shortly after being seated, we received our beverages. Andrew and I both opted for water to accompany our meals.

The colorful menu offered plenty of variety, including appetizers such as nachos with every topping imaginable: guacamole, cheese, olives, jalapeño peppers, sour cream and tomatoes. Taco salads, soups and chili, and side dishes such as Spanish rice and refried beans were also offered. There were even some options for the more American palates, such as hamburgers and steak. This was all in addition to the wide array of Mexican dishes.

Whatever your taste, there is bound to be something at Lil' Burro you will enjoy.

After Andrew looked over the menu, he quickly decided on the Big Red Burrito, which was $7.95. I, on the other hand, had a much harder time deciding on a meal, since everything looked absolutely enticing.

After much deliberation as I munched on some chips and salsa, I finally decided on the chicken enchilada platter, also $7.95. The courteous waitress took our orders and immediately took them to the kitchen.

After several minutes of chatting,

Andrew and I received our meals. Andrew's Big Red Burrito was a huge shredded beef burrito covered with a red chili sauce, along with lettuce, sour cream, Spanish rice and refried beans on the side.

My meal included three sizeable chicken enchiladas smothered in a spicy brown sauce with lettuce, tomato, Spanish rice and refried beans on the side as well. It was quite obvious neither of us would be leaving Lil' Burro hungry.

Andrew was clearly enjoying his burrito as I started to partake of my meal. The Spanish rice was perfectly cooked and the refried beans were smooth and creamy. The enchiladas were quite tasty as well, with tender shredded chicken filling each of the soft tortillas.

A dessert of fried ice cream followed our meal. The ice cream, $3.95 each, was well worth the price. The dessert arrived in a crispy tortilla bowl that was quite reminiscent of those that taco salads are served in, except flakier. The tortilla bowl was coated with cinnamon and sugar and the vanilla ice cream ball had a very tasty, crunchy, nutty fried shell and was topped with whipped cream and chocolate sauce.

The bill for our two meals, including dessert and tax, was $25.47. Lil' Burro, which accepts cash, checks or credit cards, is very affordable and a great place to bring a date or dine out with the entire family.

Another positive aspect of the dining experience of Lil' Burro was the cleanliness of the establishment. Even the bathrooms were clean and smelled fresh.

Shane Ashelford, owner of Lil' Burro, said he started the restaurant because he enjoyed cooking: "I had some good recipes and I've been cooking for 25 years."

Ashelford's favorite part of being a restaurant owner is meeting people.

"I get to meet a lot of really nice people here," he said.

If you are looking for a unique dining experience, Lil' Burro is just the place. The cozy atmosphere, friendly, efficient service, generous portions and consistently delicious Mexican cuisine make this restaurant a very enjoyable place to eat.

Dressy Bessy
Dressy Bessy
(Kindercore)

Power-pop quartet Dressy Bessy's third full-length album is pure sonic fun, plain and simple. The 11 tracks on the self-titled disc just ooze with bounciness, from disc opener "Just Once More" all the way to the closer, "Tidy."

The guitars are good 'n' crunchy, and vocalist Tammy Ealom's chirpy singing style adds just the right touch of sweetness to soften the mix. Fans of the All-Girl Summer Fun Band or the Apples in Stereo will likely find a kindred spirit in Dressy Bessy, if they haven't already.

Bottom line: This disc is a guaranteed good time. If you find yourself unable to get into the groove with Dressy Bessy, you might want to check your pulse and see if you are still breathing.

Grade: A+

Mike Errico
Skimming
(Velour)

Skimming, the newest record from spirited singer/songwriter Mike Errico, is full of upbeat tempos and pretty melodies, which combine to give a sense of musical peace on the disc's 11 tracks.

Errico's style reminds me of a less political, male version of Ani DiFranco or, in some places, the Black Crowes on acoustic guitars. Errico's voice has a deeply soulful quality to it, which, among other things, sets this disc apart from, say, the new Dashboard Confessional CD.

However, despite Errico's apparent quality, the songs seem a little bland. The songs are decent enough, it's just that nothing really sticks out.

Bottom line: Skimming is a solid effort and would probably make an excellent choice for calming background music.

Grade: B

The Raveonettes
Chain Gang of Love
(Columbia)

To be completely honest, I'm rather disappointed with the first full-length release from Danish duo, the was impressed with Whip It On, the EP that preceded Chain Gang of Love. I was impressed with the duo's fast, loud, dirty, '60s-ish rock sound. I was impressed with the combined sonic momentum of Sune Rose Wagner and Sharin Foo.

Sadly, Chain Gang of Love fails to retain the appealing qualities of Whip It On. Maybe this is because the production quality isn't so great this time around. Perhaps it's the key switching, from B-flat minor to B-flat major.

Whatever the case, Chain Gang sounds flat and half-hearted. You know when one of your friends gets a new significant other and becomes a mushy, googly-eyed specter of the person you used to know? Consider this album the sonic equivalent of that situation.

Bottom line: Not worthless, but not as good as the Raveonettes can do. If you must have it, wait a few weeks and snatch a copy up in the used bins at Homer's. There should be plenty by then.

Music industry celebrates Hip-Hop month

ANGI TYLER

Staff writer

Happy Birthday Hip-Hop!

November is nationally recognized as Hip-Hop month in the United States. According to the Universal Zulu Nation, Hip-Hop was born Nov. 12, 1974. The Zulu Nation celebrated Hip-Hop every November. It is now the world's largest and most respected Hip-Hop organization. It consists of Hip-Hop's most famous and legendary artists.

The annual celebration is a time to acknowledge the beauty of Hip-Hop and the founders who rooted and sheltered the tradition of this culture.

Hip-Hop was founded by Hip-Hop legend Afrika Bambaataa. The term Hip-Hop stemmed from Lovebug Starski. Hip-Hop celebrated life and each element formed a cultural movement.

The Hip-Hop culture evolves around energy, dynamics and momentum. It includes breakdancing, up-rocking, popping, emceeing, DJ'ing and writing, also known as Aerosol Art. It became a culture that has a key to uplifting and reformatting.

Although Rap and Hip-Hop are completely different, Rap music was a factor in the creation of Hip-Hop.

Hip-Hop's purpose is to educate and provide the importance of history and the foundation of the true elements of the Hip-Hop culture.

The true essence of Hip-Hop is remembering the reason and the focus. The reason and focus consist of peace, love, unity, respect, responsibility, overcoming, recreation, education, and faith.

Music fans from all over the world travel to New York City to celebrate the true element and exhilaration of Hip-Hop and its purpose in November. Several events are held all across the United States to celebrate the culture that has been large asset to the music industry.

So if you're looking for something to do this month, celebrate Hip-Hop. Bring the elements to life.

Brother Bear is culmination of Disney

J. PARKER ADAIR AND TREVOR FORD

Senior staff writer and junior staff writer

Disney has released a film that takes traits of some of its great, animated features. If one were to take a smorgasbord of Pocahontas, Lion King, Jungle Book, Lilo and Stitch and throw in a dash of Bambi, he or she would get Brother Bear.

Brother Bear's main theme is one centralized around family and nature. Since brotherhood is such a key to this film, I took my nine-year-old brother, Trevor, to see it with me. Together we will tag-team this film to bring you a review worth the price of admission. His comments will be italicized.

The film follows the story of Kenai, the youngest of three Native American brothers. Kenai is given a bear totem of love by Tanana an elder woman within the tribe. The totem is how Kenai is supposed to live in order to become a man.

Kenai originally denies his totem and tries to prove he is a man by hunting down a bear that stole fish from the village. This only gets Kenai into trouble and his older brother Sitka comes to save him. Just before the bear is about to attack Kenai, Sitka breaks the ice on top of the mountain forcing himself and the bear into the icy river below. Sitka dies and Kenai feels the need to hunt down the bear even more now.

As soon as Kenai avenges his brother's death the heavens seem to open up and his brother and the spirits transform him into a bear.

Kenai must also fight off his middle brother, Denahi, who is hunting all bears to avenge his brothers' deaths.

The movie was about a man that turns into a bear. Then he learns the meaning of love. How did he turn into a bear? That's for me to know and for you to find out. Like I said, he gets a bear totem. He thinks men are for fighting, but really some are for other things too. Like helping, loving and leading.

Next time, don't think of men as fighters because most of the men in the world don't fight unless they need to.

Then a bear chased them, which is how his brother dies. He saves him and his other brother sacrifices his himself. The youngest brother went to hunt a bear that killed his brother. He kills the bear and his brother comes down then swoops him and magically turns him into a bear.

Then the adventure begins.

Throughout the film, Kenai meets several interesting characters, including Rutt and Tuke.

The two northern moose add great comedic value and had me rolling in the aisles with such lines as, "Trample off, eh."

Kenai also meets a young bear named Koda, who has been separated from his mother. Koda is going to the salmon run to meet his mother again. He agrees to help Kenai the bear find the place where "the lights touch the earth" as well as keep him company.

Koda becomes like a little brother to Kenai by the time they've reached the salmon run. That's when a revelation is made as to the whereabouts of Koda's mom.

Brother Bear is an excellent film, among the best Disney has made. It is a film about brotherhood as well as finding one's self. Kenai must overcome a lot in order to find his totem. In the end, Kenai not only learns who he is, but the audience is left feeling good about themselves and more conscientious of nature. The End.

IRS offers great beats, vibrant sound

REVIEW BY ANGI TYLER

Staff writer

If you love Hip-Hop, you're guaranteed to feel the vibe that IRS and their debut album, Welcome to Planet IRS, conveys.

IRS represents Hip-Hop to the T. Their lyrics bring truth, life and a rip of soul all in one.

The Toronto, Canada rap trio includes two vocalists, Black Cat, Korry Deez and T.R.A.C.K.S., the DJ.

The album consists of thirteen joints. In particular, No. 11, T.R.A.C.K.S.' "Lament 1.5." This track rips soul and rap. In my interpretation, the song talks about never forgetting who you are, where you come from and where you're going.

The trio has been creating their own music for years, exemplifying their passion for contemporary Hip-Hop. The group IRS appreciates their success so far with the completion of their CD, and acknowledges the most High and their family and friends for support.

So check out the album. These artists are talented and it is truly shown in their album Welcome to Planet IRS.

Records fall as Mav offense rolls past Mankato

PAUL FREELAND

Senior staff writer

Senior Day proved to be memorable for the 25th-ranked Maverick football team despite their waning post-season hopes.

U N O churned out 620 yards of offense and set three new records in the Mavs' 42-25 win over Minnesota State-Mankato.

Justin Kammrad, one of 12 seniors playing in what was likely their final home game, set school records for a single game and season rushing while quarterback Brian Masek claimed the single season total offense record. Kammrad ran for 308 yards on 37 carries with two touchdowns while Masek was 16 of 35 passing for 273 yards and three touchdowns.

Kammrad gave full credit to his teammates in his run to the record books.

"There's not a lot you can really say about that," Kammrad said. "All the credit goes to the other players on the field. None of these chances would open up without them. They did a heck of a job."

Kammrad's performance was a fitting bookend to his Maverick career. The senior running back originally broke the single game rushing record in his first start as a red shirt freshman, a 239-yard performance in 2000 against Mankato. Kammrad turned in his 10th consecutive 100-yard game and fourth consecutive 200-yard game.

UNO ran up and piled on points right away against Mankato. UNO scored the first three touchdowns of the game. Masek hit Ryan Krause and Chris Denney with touchdown throws before Kammrad capped a six play, 37-yard drive with his first TD run of the afternoon to put UNO up 21-0.

Mankato answered back through a Ben King touchdown pass to Michael Lawrence, but Masek found Denney again from 22 yards out to give his team a 28-7 lead.

Kammrad continued to rumble in the third quarter, breaking away for a 29-yard TD run to

Records for UNO football this season

Ryan Krause became just the third receiver in UNO history to break 1,000 yards for the year. Krause ranks second on the list with 1,066 yards. Krause also ranks second in receptions in a season with 67 and is second in career receiving with 2,566 yards.

Brandon Pinderhughes ranks first among cornerbacks in pass break-ups in a season with 16 this year.

Brian Masek fell just short of setting the season passing efficiency record for the year. He completed 59.7 percent of his passes. The record is 61.8 percent set in 1983 by Randy Naran. Masek's 2,336 yards on the year is also the second best season for a UNO quarterback. But Masek did set the record for total offense with 2,645 yards of offense this year. He also ranks second in touchdown passes in a season with 24 this year.

Justin Kammrad broke his own single-game rushing record with 308 yards against Mankato. His previous best was 239 in his first start of the year. Kammrad also finished the year second in touchdowns for a runningback with 14. The record is 16. He also ranks second in career touchdowns by a running back, one short of the record. He is just the second back to have four 200-yard games. He got 200 in each of his final four games. He also ended with a 10-game streak of at least 100 yards. He is a Harlon Hill award (Division II's Heisman) nominee as well.

The UNO offense set a record for most first downs in a season with 246. Four UNO players were named to the North Central Conference all-academic team. Seniors Brad Borland, Gabe Meints and Justin Kammrad were named to the offense and senior linebacker Nick Sutko to the defense.

Maverick Justin Kammrad fights off MSU's Jordan Malone. Kammrad would break his all-time rushing record, rushing 308 yards in the Saturday game.

help put the Mavs up 35-10. The senior back also broke off a 56-yard run, breaking his old record with a quarter to spare.

Maverick Head Coach Pat Behrns said Kammrad's performance was a testament to his abilities.

"I've been telling people that if cloning was legal, we'd do it," Behrns said. "Justin Kammrad has had a great year. I don't know what there is to say about him that hasn't been said. If I could go out and campaign for him I would, because I don't know if there's a better football player in Division II."

Kammrad is on the 24-man list of candidates for the Harlon Hill Trophy, Division II's answer to the Heisman Trophy.

Masek scored UNO's final points of the game with 2:23 left in the third, running for an 11-yard touchdown to put the Mavs ahead 42-10. Masek, with his 273 yards passing and 14 yards rushing, finished with 2,645 yards on the season. That mark bested Marlin Briscoe's 36-year-old record of 2,639 yards in a season.

Mankato scored a pair of touchdowns to pull within 42-25, but they would come no closer to their first win of the season.

In addition to Kammrad and Masek setting milestones, Krause made his own marks. The senior receiver caught five passes for 103 yards to become just the third UNO player with 1,000 receiving yards in a season. Krause is tied for second all-time in single season receptions and alone in second 1,066 yards in a season.

UNO improved to 8-3 and 5-2 in the North Central Conference while MSM ended their season at 0-11 (0-7). The Mavs came into Saturday seventh in the Midwest region rankings and needing numerous results to go their way for a playoff berth. The fifth- and sixth-ranked teams each lost Saturday, but the outlook for UNO is still grim.

Masek said the team was frustrated at being spectators in the playoff chase.

"It just stinks that it comes down to this," Masek said. "We know we could be one of the top competitors in the playoffs. We have to hope for the best, but it's not the way we wanted it to be."

Mavericks sink Lakers and end streak

BRIAN BRASHAW

Sports editor

The streak is over, but it didn't last long.

After a 7-1 win over Lake Superior State Friday night at Qwest Center, the UNO Mavericks snapped a 14-game winless streak that dated back to Feb. 21. But Lake State came back to win Saturday night 4-1. It was Lake Superior's first conference road win since Dec. 9, 2000.

Freshman Scott Parse added to his team scoring lead with two goals Friday and, like much of the rest of the team, was smiling broadly after the game.

"I've been able to score goals at every level and that's just what I'm trying to do here," Parse said. "This is a huge confidence booster. We've just got to keep working and keep scoring goals."

Even though they started out lukewarm, the Mavericks got on the board with Mike Cabinet's fluttering wrist shot from the blue line at 14:02 of the first period.

UNO then heated up by lighting the lamp four times in the second period, including two power play goals.

Lake Superior State's Nathan Ward and Maverick Andrew Wong battle for control of the puck during Friday night's game.

Kaleb Betts got the team's first power play goal of the period and his first as a Maverick with a red-line wrister at 2:16 in the second. The tough-angle shot beat LSSU goalie Matt Violin to the top shelf. Less than two minutes later, Dan Hacker scored from the same spot.

In the second period, the Lakers held the zone for over two minutes and took advantage of four defensive zone turnovers, but the end result was still a UNO goal.

Parse finally chipped the puck out of the zone, chased and carried the puck into Laker territory, undressed defenseman Ryan Reid and scored five-hole.

"That tells you how smart coaches are, they have us pinned in our area and we're screaming get it out, dumb it, ice it," Head Coach Kemp said. "All the sudden Scotty Parse gets it out and the move he made, you're going to see on ESPN. That was an NHL caliber play. And yeah, that had a huge part impact because it was a deflating goal."

Parse got his second, a power play goal, five minutes later. A Betts shot deflected by Violin left the goal wide open for Parse. Mike Lefley added two more goals for UNO in the third period.

UNO's dreams of post-season glory took yet another hit as the No. 15 Mavericks lost to North Dakota for the second time this season.

UND toppled the Mavericks 2-1 in the North Central Conference tournament semifinals, held in frigid Mankato, Minn. The loss signaled the first NCC tournament final that did not feature a UNO-Minnesota State-Mankato final.

Maverick Head Coach Don Klosterman said his team played well and was unlucky to come out on the losing end.

"I thought we played as well as we've played all season," Klosterman said. "The game just didn't go our way. Things like that happen. I don't think it was anything our girls did or didn't do. It's frustrating, but that's the way sports are sometimes."

Ashley Grace helped create the match's first goal, beating her defender down the left sideline and sending a cross into Stephanie Kirby. Kirby, one of three Maverick seniors, touched the ball past UND's keeper to put the Mavs up 1-0.

UNO spent most of the opening half in the Fighting Sioux's defensive end, but could not prize another score before halftime.

Klosterman said his team addressed controlling the midfield coming into the tournament.

"We wanted to be more aggressive in midfield," Klosterman said. "We had control of the game most of the time, so I thought we did well in that aspect."

UND pulled level 10 minutes into the second half. Johanna Mularoni sent a cleared corner kick back into the box and Stephanie Pfeiffer laced a shot into the upper corner.

Jessica Dotson had a chance to put the Mavs back in the lead, but her free header from a Kirby free kick sailed wide. Haley Fries also came close two minutes before the end of regulation, rolling her shot across the face of goal and wide.

Pfeiffer made the Mavericks pay for their missed chances just 1:10 into overtime, running onto a long ball from Dana Parry behind the Mav defense. Keeper Amy Price slipped on her way out to confront Pfeiffer and the Fighting Sioux striker chipped the match-winner into the net.

UNO fell to 14-2-3 with the defeat and now must wait to find out their fate in the NCAA Central region. The top four teams in the region advance to the NCAA tournament with the top seed hosting first and second round matches.

Regional selections and match-ups were yet to be announced at press time, but likely participants are No. 8 Truman State, UND, MSM and UNO.

Despite temperatures barely breaking 20 degrees, a stiff north wind and a treacherous playing surface, top-seeded Mankato held off South Dakota State 1-0 in the other semifinal to make their fourth consecutive final. MSM eventually won the tournament in a penalty kick shootout after finishing overtime even at 2-2 with UND.

Klosterman said his team could do little but wait on the news from the NCAA.

"We've been in this situation before," Klosterman said. "Now it's just a waiting game. We're not going to change anything all that much. We have the right people in the right positions. We just have to stay the course and hope the ball bounces our way. You always need that little bit of luck, but we're not that lucky of a team this year."

Streak finally ends for volleyball team

J. PARKER ADAIR

Senior staff writer

For nearly a month, the Maverick volleyball team went without a win. They last defeated Augustana for the only conference victory of the season. That all changed Friday night.

UNO traveled to St. Cloud, Minn. to avenge a 3-2 defeat from Sept. 27.

The Mavs came out strong against the second worst team in the North Central Conference. Despite being out hit, UNO walked away with a 30-27 victory in the first game of the match.

By the time the second game rolled along, they were striking on all cylinders and Amy McLeay was not only hitting hard, but hitting under control.

The ladies enjoyed the best hitting performance of the evening with .391-.104 advantage in game two.

With a commanding lead, UNO had to close out the match, which has been a difficult task all year long. The Mavs have not won a game five all year, so winning one of the next two games was key.

Instead of letting it get to a game four or five, the Mavs clamped down on the Huskies and won 30-25 to sweep the match.

McLeay was clearly dominant as she hit at an astounding .586 clip. Her 18 kills compared to one error show her maturity throughout the season. She also recorded 10 digs earning her 19th double-double of the season.

Jenny Rankin also recorded her own double-double with 10 kills and 13 digs.

Consistency has been a problem all season long for the Mavericks, but Friday they hit for at least .350.

Unfortunately the great success from the night prior apparently did not make the road trip to Mankato.

On Saturday night UNO showed up against Minnesota State-Mankato. That's about all they did. The northern Mavericks thundered past their Nebraskan counterparts by a score of 30-21, 30-22, 30-22.

McLeay came nowhere near the success of the previous evening, recording only seven kills and five digs.

Senior Kylie Lebeda recorded 22 assists. All-American hitter Jen Jacobs recorded 20 kills and 14 digs in the win for the 16th-ranked Mankato.

The Mavericks fell to 11-18 overall and 2-11 in the NCC. Their final match of the season will be Saturday at the University of South Dakota.

captain this week.

"I'm a grinding kind of person, and those are the types of goals I got tonight," Lefley said. "They want a leader by example, and your captain is supposed to do that and it was nice for me to get a couple goals and say I'm ready to lead you guys."

Lake State did score a power play goal in the third period and actually out shot UNO on the game, 29-26.

Laker Head Coach Frank Anzalone was notably upset with his team. After the game Anzalone made a brief and matter-of-fact statement.

"Nebraska needed a win and they went and got it. It's pretty simple. I don't think we were as bad as we were ugly," Anzalone said. "We're embarrassed. Not embarrassed by losing, but embarrassed by the score. Those are the types of things we were trying to not have happen anymore."

UNO scored the most goals since a 7-3 win over Ferris State on Oct. 28, 2000 and their first CCHA win since Feb. 1 against Bowling Green.

But the celebration didn't last long.

homosexual marriage and would therefore strongly encourage him not to marry another man. However, if one day he finds himself in love with another man and wants to enter into a relationship with that person, it is certainly no place of mine to say that he should not or can not. The voters of Nebraska and Dan Koborg have absolutely no business deciding whether or not my relationships are valid based solely on what's in between my legs or whether or not I will have children. Homosexual relationships are just as valid and worthy as any heterosexual's relationship and there is no reason to believe or decree otherwise. Lesbian and gay people aren't fighting for the right to marriage simply so that they can marry their siblings, parents or dogs as Koborg and other opponents of equality

Saturday night the Lakers came back and played their game. They were physical with UNO, got on the board early and played a trap after they got the lead. UNO couldn't solve it and fell 4-1.

Jon Booras put LSSU on the board 6:30 into the first period. Booras fired a wrist shot from the top of the circle and just plain beat Holt.

Lake Superior then focused on chasing pucks and clogging the slot. Then in the second period, they got their break and the game-winning goal. Bo Cheesman received a pass Trent Campbell and came in on a breakaway. Cheesman waited for Holt to move and flipped backhand over Holt.

That was all LSSU would need. UNO got a power play goal late in the game, but by that time they were down 3-0. The Lakers added an empty net goal.

UNO fell to 1-5-2 on the season, with three points and 11th place in the conference. LSSU is now 3-3-2, but this was their first conference win and are still in 12th.

UNO continues the home stand next week against seventh place Northern Michigan.

may argue. These kinds of statements are petty, ridiculous and just a sad attempt to dilute the real issue at stake. Exclusion from the institution of marriage is only one facet of society in which discrimination is occurring against homosexuals and it must stop.

The Netherlands, Belgium and Canada are three countries that have acknowledged that their gay and lesbian citizens rightly deserve equal standing in society and they now recognize gay marriage. Considering that the divorce rate in the U.S. is nearly 50 percent, perhaps it's time that our society look at its definition of marriage and admit that if there is a threat to that institution, it's certainly not from homosexuals.

Sincerely,
Michael J. Taylor

Organization at UNO

By construction, these voters also tend to be in higher economic/professional positions than the average Joe. They may also be more diverse than we previously thought. They may include lots of women, gays and lesbians, other minorities, etc. And they tend to be silent in their moderate political views, because, life experience has taught us you can't score much by being a moderate.

Although these middle-ground voters may have "extreme" views on certain issues, some falling on the left curve and some on the right side, being an open-minded moderate has taught them to be open to views from all sides. And, their optimism and strong belief in the world moving in the right direction and generally becoming a better place for all has made them slowly change their views on certain things, if necessary, for the common good. If a definitely old and arguable respectable long-time U.S. Senator from the South could change his strong stands on racial and other issues during the last years of his life,

One can kick back and think of the general social trends of the future, and are thus less likely to say things that fifty or seventy years down the road, will embarrass their grandchildren when the future generations are culling published commentary on a certain topic with their grade school classmates from the World Wide Web.

Sometimes when I hear some politicians or (more so) commentators saying certain outrageous things, I'm thinking, their grandchildren are going to be ashamed of their last names! But you read or hear about those commentaries all the time. Those commentators are likely not stupid, they probably know the social trend well, it's just that they seem to be willing to sacrifice the long term for instant gratification. It's akin to what's been going on in the investment world for hundreds of years: they know history will nail them down as bad money managers, but they are more than happy to fool you into bad investment deals while they still can.

So those are the characters you can expect to see on a Thursday night in Omaha. Thursday is Omaha's party night. It's better than Friday because everyone knows that Friday is date night. It's better than Saturday, because there are too many options for a Saturday night in Omaha and the clubs are hit and miss. ### from MATRIX, page 3

Last week, the would be evangelists of The Matrix unleashed the final revelation of the brave new world they envisioned on an expectant mass of followers and an unsuspecting public. The apocalypse which many had waited for and even more had sworn by, not only showed itself to be unworthy of its prequel, it was an absolute disgrace in the light of the promise delivered by the first words and prophecies that had birthed the entire chronicle. The conclusion, it turns out, was no conclusion at all. The closing scenes, which one might expect to be of ardor and glory and other things of that sort, turn out to be a mish-mash of hastily arranged scenes; dressed up in a garb of unnecessary miracles and shoved down the throat of the faithful. A satisfactory exploration of the relationship between The Oracle and The Architect is left as uncharted terrain, more undeveloped characters are brought into the narrative and the passion of The One is treated with such levity that his mission loses the air of both

I've never uttered more than a frustrated "damn" to my parents, or committed too severe of a familial transgression.

For the most part, I've treated those women I've loved like they deserve to be treated. I've never hit woman in anger, or anyone else for that matter. By most accounts, I'm a pacifist at heart. mystery and revelation. The concept of love is also hurriedly dealt with and concept of sacrifice, perhaps, central to the entire tale, is buried under a clutter of flashing lights and thundering voices. Revolutions fell flat on its face the moment its creators decided to abandon the conceptual richness that characterized the first part in favor of a perennial display of miracles.

There is no doubt in my mind, of course, that Reloaded and Revolutions are both good movies, as movies go. However, one must insist, that the promise of The Matrix was not just a good movie – the promise was an enduring legend. In this respect, the movement has failed in sore proportions.

I do not what will become of the members of this cult. Perhaps they will fade into the shadows like so many before them; perhaps they will attempt to defend the indefensible. One thing however is for sure – like the fads which become religion and the empires that are built on them, The Matrix has executed a classic script – it has failed to deliver on its promise; the prophecy has not been fulfilled.

Another aspect of the project includes creating community involvement as an outcome of undergraduate education and getting students to give back to the community. Through this, the project hopes to improve the quality of life of the surrounding areas in Nebraska.

"This is supposed to build community," Fleener said of the Web site. "You have membership, you can interact with people and you can post your own stories online."

"If you look at what's going on around the world, people are losing their lives fighting for the freedoms we take for granted every day," he said. "How do you impress people with that idea? That's what we're going to work on."

The project is funded through the Office of the Chancellor at UNO.
